URZ SHORT SELLERS

Starting in 2007 and through early 2008 short sellers actively shorted URZ which resulted in the stock price dropping from $7.65 to $0.40 by December 2008. Shorts have once again been building a new position as shares of URZ have risen to as high as $2.50 recently.

OVERVIEW OF URZ SHORT SALE DATA

After careful analysis of URZ short sale, naked short sale and market maker friction factor data it is clear that URZ has historically had significant issues with short sellers which have previously decreased the company's market capitalization by over $465 million ($7.25 drop on 64.19 million shares outstanding). Short sellers have been rebuilding a moderate position in shares of URZ and market makers have a bearish-bias as of late. New evidence of daily short sellers shorting shares of URZ has now come to light as the SEC has finally given Buyins.net access to DAILY short sale data which is updated every night. Protecting URZ from abusive shorting is once again a priority.

The above data is used to calculate if a fair market is being made in the shares of URZ. 33% of recent trading days are positive or bullishly biased and 67% of trading days are negative or bearishly biased. Days where trading was abnormal shows 50% bullish and 50% bearish biases, which means that there is a bearishly-biased market being made in URZ in the past two weeks.

Friction Factor determines if there is normal or abnormal behavior in the price action of the stock when compared to the buying vs. selling trading statistics. It calculates number of net shares of buying or selling to move price +/- one cent.

Here is how to understand Friction Factor:

1. If Friction Factor is positive, more buying than selling caused URZ's price to rise
2. If Friction Factor is negative, more selling than buying caused URZ's price to fall
3. If Friction Factor is 0, there was no discernable activity either way
4. If Friction Factor is abnormal, it means that there is either a bearish bias or a bullish bias to how market makers are making market in your stock.
